THE FAYETTE CONTESTED ELECTION CASE.

The Yeoman pre-judges the contest between Messrs. Goodloe and Price, in Fayette, and says that it has no doubt that the Legislature will promptly admit Dr. Price to his seat. We are afraid that the Yeoman speaks by the card, but we are very confident that Mr. Goodloe will leave that body no excuse for depriving him of his rights. When they sin, the case will be so presented that they will sin against light and knowledge.

Louisville Commercial.

The Commercial is in error. The paragraph to which it alludes was copied and credited to the Lexington Gazette, and the expression of opinion in the case which is criticized was not ours, but that of the Gazette. The fact that Col. Goodloe, who holds the certificate of election is a Republican and Dr. Price the contestant, a Democrat, might lead us to prefer to see the county of Fayette represented by the latter, but would, in no respect, prejudice our mind against the just claims of the former. In contesting the seat, Dr. Price exercises only the right which every candidate who believes he was not legally or fairly beaten has under the law, and the result will depend, we are satisfied, entirely upon the soundness of his reasons presented to the only court which can decide the case—the Legislature itself. The grounds, as we understand them, upon which the seat is claimed are, that a separate poll not provided for by law was opened on the day of election, and that many fraudulent votes were polled for Col. Goodloe. The latter, any one will see, is a question of fact to be decided by evidence—the former one of law, which, it has always seemed to us, would have been better referred to the courts upon an application for a mandamus, but which may be safely trusted to the Legislature. It is claimed, we believe, that the contestant consented to the opening of the new poll. If so, it is only a question as to how far the consent of any one can cure an alleged illegal proceeding. Col. Goodloe, having the certificate of election, will take his seat when the Legislature meets, and the matter will go before a board of not more than nine or less than five members of the House, as provided by the statute, who will be charged with an examination of the facts, and will report the same when duly ascertained. That they will be governed by strict impartiality and discharge their duty in accordance with their solemn oaths, we are as confident as that the House, in its ultimate action, will be unbiased by partisan prejudice, and decide the contest wholly upon its merits. To argue that because the Legislature is overwhelmingly Democratic, it is only necessary for a Democrat to contest the seat of a Republican, would be judging that honorable body too much by the standard of morality which governed the Radical Congress when it so shamelessly violated decency by its acts in this respect.

The Galveston (Texas) News says: "The dispatches bring us the unpalatable intelligence that the Democracy of the State of New York have been badly beaten. What would the Tribune, Times, and other journals of that stripe say if Governor Hoffman were to follow the example of the Governor of Texas, and refuse certificates of election to those candidates who have been chosen by the people? They would heap maledictions on his head and call for his immediate impeachment. In this they would do nothing more than right, and he would deserve the severest reprobation and punishment. What is the position of Governor Davis in this respect? Although the Democrats had large majorities in every district in Texas, Governor Davis refused to give certificates to two of the four members of Congress.

The opponents of President Grant's renomination will hold a meeting at Harrisburg on the 30th to take steps to defeat his nomination by the Republicans.

According to late advices from Mexico the outbreak against the administration of Juarez is assuming most alarming proportions. In all parts of the country, strong, popular men are heading the people in opposition to the President. The State of Oaxaca has pronounced in favor of the revolutionists. General Porfirio Diaz is at the head of a formidable army. The States of Aqua, Calientes, Durango, Zacatecas, and Coahuila, have also pronounced, and are moving in the revolutionary cause. Smaller pronouncements have been issued in all the States; the Governors are resigning, and general alarm prevails everywhere. Disaffection exists in the army, and Generals and Colonels, with their commands, are joining the revolutionists. Other officers are disaffected, and the government is paralyzed. The treasury is bankrupt, and the people are going over to the revolutionists. These are the current rumors of the day. But they must be taken with great allowance.

FROM FLORIDA.

Not long since a sensational and unfounded report found circulation in the press to the effect that a large part of Orange county, Florida, had sunk and become covered with water. The following communication, addressed to the Tallahassee Sentinel, has been sent us by Robt. W. Scott, Esq., who is spending the winter in that county, and is indorsed by his hearty approval:

THE SINK IN ORANGE COUNTY.

ORANGE COUNTY, FLA., Oct. 1, 1871.
ED. SENTINEL: As a citizen of this beautiful county, I ask that the press of Florida shall defend us against the slanders so recently perpetrated upon us, as a people, as a county, as a State, by some unknown party, whose article, written in a fit of mischief, has done more to injure our county than all the Ku-Klux or the war. This article about the sink of Orange county has been copied by the leading papers throughout America and Europe, in the French and German papers; and I have seen letters from prominent men and capitalists of the North ordering a withdrawal of funds sent for investment in this county, and thereby giving evidence to this article. Please deny all the statements made, and give it the lie direct. Orange county is fast becoming, owing to its known delightful climate, rich tropical lands, and immediate bright future and healthy record, the empire county of Florida; and to quietly allow so base an article to gain credence in the American and European press, and thereby to cause a neglect of duty which I am not willing to "shoulder," or to allow to be placed at my door. Orange county is the highest county of the peninsula of Florida. Every important stream of the peninsula rises in it. The St. Johns, a few miles south of and running along its border line almost due north; the Ocklawaha, rising in it, runs north and east; the Kissimmee, rising in it, runs almost due south; Peace Creek, rising in it, runs southwest; and the Withlacoochee, rising in it, runs north and west. The beautiful speculation of the prominent papers about our sub-strata formation is interesting indeed, and geological fossils may later settlers from coming to our beautiful lands, but those of us who are on the ground will see it.

We cordially say to strangers looking for permanent investment, from the Lakes to the Gulf, to come and find this county as God made it originally—high, dry, healthy, rich, surpassing in loveliness of scenery her sister counties, and rapidly filling with men of honest purpose—quiet now, socially, morally, and politically, and holding out inducements rarely possessed by any country on the habitable globe.

Please indorse by publication for the benefit of the State.
Very respectfully,
M. R. MARKS.

THE PRESIDENT'S NEW STABLE.

The Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial gives the following account of the elegant new stable which Gen. Grant is building, to be paid for by the taxpayers of the country:

The President is building a new stable for his blooded stock, his eighteen horses, more or less, including the sore-tailed colt. It will be a first-class stable in every respect. It is built of Philadelphia pressed brick, with brown Seneca stone trimmings, deep cornice, slate roof, symmetrical chimneys, and handsome ornamentation wherever it could be made available. It has a nice belfry and steeple, not unlike Dr. Newman's, but smaller. Horses don't need as high stables as human beings, any way. The climate of bells has not, so far as I can learn, yet been ordered, but it would hardly seem right to have a chime of bells on the Administration stable. The attention of Dr. Pratt, the horse-tamer, who contributed so liberally to the chime, to Dr. Newman's church, and one of the bells named for him, is called to this fact; and as Dr. Pratt, the Administration horse-breaker, gave exhibitions for the benefit of the Administration church, why should not Dr. Newman, the Administration person, give exhibitions for the benefit of the Administration stables?

One of the inscriptions on the Newman bells would answer for the stable bells, namely: "In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses, Holiness unto the Lord." The stable is also to have all the modern conveniences, gas, hot and cold water in every room (they are rooms, although they are called stalls), with water-closets and bath-rooms attached. There is also, I believe, to be a reception-room, a smoking-room, a pantry, kitchen, sideboard, and all such elements of refinement. Each horse is to have his own quarters, dining-room, parlor, &c. There will be a competent medical officer always in attendance. There will be rooms for blankets, for whips, for harness, and for furs, and the carriages will be most comfortably provided for. In the meantime, where is the money to come from?

DEATH OF A PROMINENT VIRGINIAN.

The Richmond Enquirer announces the death of Col. Marmaduke Johnson, a prominent lawyer of that city, and pays the following tribute to his worth:

Not only in Richmond, but throughout the entire State, was the intelligence of the death of Col. Marmaduke Johnson, a prominent lawyer, one of the most profound feelings of sorrow. Death has singled out few brighter marks in our community for his deadly blows during the closing year, and none have been stricken who were more universally loved by the people for his many noble qualities, or more respected for his high attainments.

Whether as a soldier in the field, as the advocate of the rights and liberties of his dear native State in the forum, or as the simple defender of the poor and humble at the bar, he was the same unselfish, brave, devoted, and high-toned gentleman; and few have won a warmer place in the hearts of the people, or will hold their fame fresh and green in their memories by a surer and stronger tenure.

THE HOT SPRINGS OF ARKANSAS—MODE OF ACCESS—LOCATION—PROPERTIES OF THE WATERS—MODES OF BATHING—WONDERFUL CURES.

NUMBER 1.

HOT SPRINGS HOTEL, ARKANSAS, November 15, 1871.

DEAR COLONEL: Years ago we had learned the fact that across the great "Father of waters," far off in the Western wilds, had been found a secluded valley shut in by huge mountains; that a hidden band had "touched those mountains and they smoked," and from that touch, high up one of those lofty peaks and along its base, there gushed forth thermal streams "for the healing of the nations." We had heard, too, that long before civilization with advancing step had moved this way, the red man was familiar with the power of these waters and pointed with adoration to the Great Spirit who sent them forth as free and pure as the air he breathed in his wild-wood home. The early pioneers, who, one by one, threaded their way through the trackless wilderness, soon ascertained the potent agency residing in these springs for the cure of disease, and gathering up the legends and traditions from the savage bands who were pushing on nearer to wards the setting sun, headed them down to their descendants, and they in turn to theirs, until hither the afflicted began to come. In course of time the place became famous; living evidences were to be seen in the hamlets and the crowded cities of once wasted forms restored to their wonted vigor, of attenuated cheeks blooming again with the freshness of youth, and at the present period of time year by year, every part of our broad expanse of country is represented, as well as Europe and the Canadas.

As we had been a sufferer for nine successive months, dragging along through weary days and sleepless nights, we concluded to come in search of these rejuvenating fountains, and after a tedious journey of six days halted at the Hot Springs of Arkansas. Being the first delegate from our "hill-girt city" to the invaluable convention that here holds its annual, and we might say continual, sittings, we deemed that the friends we left behind would not object, at least to a few points of interest connected with this great rendezvous, and hence, we propose to give, through the columns of the Yeoman, some observations as indicated by the headings of this letter. Nearly all the visitors that assemble here reside beyond the limits of the State, many at a great distance; and the question is often asked, what is the mode of access to the springs?

Commencing with Memphis, now accessible by rail from all parts of the country, as a point of concentration, you cross the Mississippi by ferry and seat yourself in the coaches of the Memphis and Little Rock railroad. Until within the last year, this road extended from Little Rock to Davall's Bluff, on White river, and for a long time it remained a problem whether it would go beyond that point. It certainly did require pluck and patience on the part of an engineer to project, and still more so on the part of a contractor to construct a highway of travel through such a country. Low, marshy, subject to overflow, nothing desirable in the soil, and at certain seasons abounding with malarious poison, it is hard to understand how the laborers escaped with life, after being subjected to working, eating, and sleeping in those dismal swamps. Self-interest, however, coupled with the progressive spirit of the times, overcomes all obstacles, and thus the road has been completed after a fashion. From Davall's Bluff westward the region is better, the route being more elevated and the land of preferable quality. The distance is one hundred and thirty-five miles; and leaving Memphis early in the morning, after a jaunt of ten hours you reach the terminus on the eastern bank of the Arkansas river. Re-ascending again to a ferry, and ascending the bluff on the opposite side, you are in the city of Little Rock, the capital of the State. Here let us remark, that although this is a place of some trade and importance, and with a reported population of fifteen thousand, it cannot afford anything that approximates a decent hotel. Since the war a spacious building has been erected for the purpose, opened in due form, put on considerable style in the way of price (four dollars per day), but at last, solely from want of a little enterprise on part of the citizens, it has gone under, and the place is supernely permitted to rest under the reproach of affording the traveler only fourth or fifth class houses at which to stop. As we were passing through the city, we saw what we called a crowd, but to which the people of the South have become accustomed, viz: Negro policemen on the streets swinging their batons with quite an air of authority. We make no comments, as this is not our subject, and asking pardon for a short digression we now go back to the topics on which we started out.

From the capital city to Hot Springs there are two modes of conveyance—one by stage, the other by hacks, each taking different roads—the stage going on one to make connections with stages to other points, the hacks going the other, supposed to be the best. Here now begins the wear and tear part of the journey to invalids; and from the experience of our party, we saw what we called a crowd, but to which the people of the South have become accustomed, viz: Negro policemen on the streets swinging their batons with quite an air of authority. We make no comments, as this is not our subject, and asking pardon for a short digression we now go back to the topics on which we started out.

So runs the story; and as we tried only one road, can say, if that was the best, may we ever be delivered from the other. In the construction of the hacks, some consideration has been exhibited for the comfort of the class of invalids who are transported in them. They are stout, sufficiently roomy, the bodies placed on strong but yielding springs, and so arranged that the seats can be brought in juxtaposition, forming a bed, the division between the front seat and the driver laid flat, the passenger can then assume a semi-recumbent position. Others are so arranged, that the invalid can be lifted in, sitting in his own large easy chair, which is braced securely to prevent his falling, and thus he moves along. It is not always the real sick and afflicted, however, who take the hacks, others sometimes preferring them in order to make the journey more leisurely.

Starting out from Little Rock, you are informed that there are houses of entertainment on the way where you will be duly cared for, and as a sample of the interior hotels of Arkansas, we will give account as it happened to us. After proceeding about fourteen miles over hills, in the sand, along the base of mountains, we saw what we called a crowd, but to which the people of the South have become accustomed, viz: Negro policemen on the streets swinging their batons with quite an air of authority. We make no comments, as this is not our subject, and asking pardon for a short digression we now go back to the topics on which we started out.

ups and downs of the ride were not soothing to our aches and pains, they had given us an appetite. From the representations made to us we had expected one of those good square meals, as they are termed, which we get at the hospitable farm houses in our Kentucky "home," but we gave you the bill of fare and let you judge. "Fat greens and greens (the bacon very fat and the greens very green), biscuit plenty enough to have had chills, but tough a plenty to be of some age, potatoes and coffee. It is our custom to give even old Nick his due, and we will admit that the last article was excellent. How it came to form the exception and stand out in contrast to the bad company of its associates is not easily understood, for it is one of the things we least expect in traveling to find of good quality. In this instance it came not amiss—with us it is a favorite—and giving evidence of full appreciation, we minced a biscuit and excused ourselves from further participation on the ground of indigestion. Next in order was the bill, and the landlord appeared to us with as much importance as if he was proprietor of the Fifth Avenue, Continental, or Galt House, and replied "one dollar, sir." We do not think we were ever charged with being stingy, but our purse did open rather slowly to this, yet our host had made no exception of us, and being as polite in his same treatment, as being as polite in his way as the heads of the princely establishments referred to, the greenback was handed over and our journey resumed.

Sixteen miles beyond, we arrived at the half-way house, stopping for the night. In due time, being seated around the supper table, we saw at a glance it far surpassed the dinner. The biscuits were much sicker, half-dinner, took the place of fat bacon and greens, and as for the coffee, our sympathy prevented much of an onslaught upon it, for, being debilitated ourselves, we had neither disposition or energy to disturb anybody or anything in like condition. Worrying through, we soon retired, and found one red-headed fellow in the establishment—clean and comfortable in the establishment. At an early hour we arose to make good use of time and close our travel that day, but the biscuits were so sick they did not rise at all, corn bread being the substitute, with the evening accompaniments of pork and impoverished coffee. Anxious to leave and hunt some other place where a reasonable appetite could be indulged, the hill was called for, and with even more emphasis than the keeper of the dinner stand, we were informed two dollars. Once under way, we appealed to our driver to hasten to the terminus, as a few more such stoppages at places of "entertainment for man and beast" would leave us but little for extras and incidentals at the Springs. Taking prices as a standard, can you deny that we stopped at first-class houses?

Our statement, however, must be confirmed as we are only one traveler against two land lords, and we were gratified, in the course of a week, to greet our friend Mr. E. S. T., who had followed in our tracks. He, too, had encountered the bacon and greens; but on the day he reached the half-way stand, he had, he said, caused a young stage to bite the dust, and the decline of the sun had it all ready to sizzle and broil for the evening meal. He pointed our friend to it as a good exploit, and gave assurances that he should soon enjoy a taste of the tender saddle. So it known that this house had what Tupper styled a "well spring of pleasure," i. e., a baby, and it was, tested, its lungs by a stout, healthy cry, an idyllic struck our landman. Thought he, "if I go and quiet the juvenile, it will be a passport to the good graces of the mother, and she will see to it that I have a nice supper." Excitement was as quick as the thought, and in a moment the youngster was an object of his tenderness. He discoursed of Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup and other curatives, showed us around in all the technicalities of the nursery, and to the joy of the parent, turned the lusty hawl into a smile and coo. His efforts were not unnoticed, and he began to picture the tender steak, floating in its bed of nice fresh butter, with a du ad mixture of salt, pepper, and onion, and some condiments. Impatiently waiting for the sum of money, it came at last; but the sorrowful disappointment of our friend can be better imagined than described. The venison was fied in tallow of such athletic quality that T declined the contest. He did not want to be roughly handled, and hence he handled the savory dish but lightly; and as he could not keep out of the way of its robust odor, with a look, he inwardly murmured, "Two ever thus from childhood's hour, &c." His report was the coffee and the biscuit, the former not having yet gained strength nor the latter much color. Retiring to his couch he dreamed a dream, and arose with the sun to see if he could not verify it. He was not to be cheated out of a tender morsel, and he was up and ready to win it. He had a vision of the road to success, and he set out to find it. That dream was to see the cook—that road led to the kitchen. Thither he turned his steps, and, casting his eye on a female specimen of African descent, "aunt," said he, "have you a grid-iron?" "Well, dar, used to, s'pose this here yit," replied Aunt. "Then, you got it, and, in nice style, broil me a piece of venison, and you shall be remembered." Cheered by the prospect of nickel, she entered upon the search, and succeeded in drawing forth from a chunk in the wall the afore-said utensil, covered with the rust, if not the dust, of ages. To prepare for service it must needs be cleaned, and the first step in this direction was to lubricate with the same yellow that kept an appetite at bay on the previous evening. "Breakfast is ready, sir," came with a welcome ring to the ears of the hungry guest, who thought all right this time, but who, in his anxiety to enjoy the coveted dish, forgot that troubles seldom come single. He sat up his plate to receive a cascade of water, when he beheld the last scene of the case, when the first. He had not bargained for the tallow and dirt also, but was abundantly supplied with both, which so excited his indignation as well high led him into a broil. Reflecting upon the transitory nature of all earthly things, he paid two dollars to secure his release from this new disappointment, and on his arrival at Hot Springs, the question uppermost in his mind was, "do you get venison here—how is it?"

Please remember we have been coming the better road, the one suggested to the sick who are advised not to hurry themselves, but consult their comfort and convenience. How much of these blessings are obtained by coming this way, the reader must form his own conclusion, but we opine that the consideration which would induce one to take the other highway is, that jolt and toss and tumble and shake, together with our biscuit and our friend's venison, are lavished upon us in one day and not in detail. Oh! how we did long for a railroad or wish for a turnpike. We are informed it is in contemplation to have the iron horse skirt around the mountain range that shuts in this spot from the outer world, thus bringing the visitor within twenty miles, and for the sake of afflicted humanity may that day soon come. From the description we have given a reasonable inference is, that two things are essential to any one who determines to come to the Hot Springs. The visitor must have hope "which springs eternal in the human breast," and it must spring strong and high. 2. An indomitable will. Endowed with these two requisites he can bid adieu to the endearments of home, and despite the tediousness and miserable accommodations that confront him, and exercising patient endurance he will ultimately arrive at the LOCATION OF THE SPRINGS, sixty miles southwest of Little Rock, by being ingershed between two high, rocky, one mile in length, varying in width from two hundred yards, lying due north and south, and bounded by mountains on the east and west. Diagonally through the valley passes a small stream, Hot Spring creek, a portion of its way lying along the base of the eastern mountain, in which are located all but one of the springs, and from that fact derived the name of Hot Spring's mountain. The Alum Spring shows itself in a very small but never-failing view on the west side of the creek, and very near its margin. The creek is very narrow and shallow, yet clear and constant, affords a good receptacle for the waste of the bath, houses and the springs coming from the mountain, and empties itself seven miles distant into the Wachita river. Bridges are erected both for pedestrians and vehicles at convenient points, thus affording easy communication between the two sides of the valley. The village contains five hundred inhabitants, eight hotels, with another in process of erection; fifteen boarding-houses, two billiard and ten drinking saloons, thirty places for the sale of merchandise, from the vendor at the street fruit stand to the merchant displaying his wares by the thousands, four churches, one Catholic and Protestant (Episcopal, Methodist, and Baptist) two school-houses, one for the white, the other for the colored citizens, two drug stores, five bath-houses, eleven physicians, three blacksmith and one wagon shop, a Masonic Lodge and Chapter, circulating library, newspaper (Hot Spring's Courier), photograph gallery, jewelry store, express and telegraph offices, one white magistate and one colored constable. The houses are all well clothed, built with the planks upright and striped, and not a half dozen of them plastered; the partitions between the rooms consist of a single thickness of plank not over an inch, which, together with the ceiling, are covered with paste-board, and then whitewashed or papered. Very few have fire-places, the greater number having fires and heated by stoves. The small space admits but little room for yards around dwellings, and this matters not, as the ground is so sterile that vegetation or shrubbery could never flourish. As regards the hotels, which are all filled in the summer season, the rooms and bedding are quite comfortable, and considering the barrenness of the country around and the remoteness from any market of supplies, the tables are reasonably well furnished. The principal one is the Hot Springs Hotel, the proprietors of which are Messrs. Stitt & Lewis, courteous and agreeable gentlemen, ever ready to minister to the wants of their guests. The housekeeper is Miss Eliza Burke, formerly of the Capital Hotel, whilst under the proprietorship of Messrs. Gray & Saffell. This lady can hardly be surpassed in the position she occupies, and the landlords should deem themselves fortunate in securing the services of one so well adapted to her duties. This establishment is the only one that approximates first-class, and we would respectfully suggest to the heads of it the one thing needful to make it so, viz: an adept in the art of de cuisine, or, in other words, a good first-rate cook. We do not refer to any desire for epicurean dishes with high sounding names, but it wants a cook that can serve up in proper style the usual wholesome fares we require one day after another; and if our suggestion is heeded we guarantee abundant patronage. It has already secured that patronage, and is as clean, as comfortable, and well kept, but not least, it is the resort of the better class of visitors. It is not to be inferred from this, that respectable people do not take up their abode at other houses, but you are sure to find them here.

The reason assigned for the lack of more desirable and substantial improvements, in the way of building, is the fact that the title to the property has never been definitely settled. It is claimed by the Federal Government as well as by various individuals, who base their right on long years possession. The matter is now pending in the Supreme Court, and when once adjudicated, this now uninviting village will assume an entirely different aspect. The preparations for the reception of all those who are the holders of the hundreds that now flock here, will be on a scale commensurate with the increasing reputation of the wonderful waters. The number is increasing year after year, and once made easy of access, with spacious and conveniently arranged hotels, it will be the resort of thousands. It may appear a little curious how, in a healthy locality, and with a population of one hundred and eleven physicians can manage to live; but when we tell you that the average number of persons frequenting here is fifteen hundred per annum, that the majority have means to pay, and nearly all consult with some medical adviser, it is perceived that an easy allotment of one hundred patients to a doctor could be made with some to spare. Reflect still further, that each of these patients would average a stay of a month, whilst a large number remain two and three months, and then you can see how the M. D.s can flourish. The harvest for them is from April to November, and the fees of those eight months carry them safely, and some of them handsomely, through the year. We are, however, justly entitled to the rewards of their labor, as most of the cases submitted to them are of an obstinate chronic character, and require thorough investigation and study. The leading examiners are Drs. Lawrence, Hobson, and Brooks, who are deservedly and liberally patronized, and are up with the times; being especially posted on the diseases here seeking a remedy. The first mentioned is widely known to the profession both in this and other States, and has been selected by the National Medical Association to prepare an essay on climatology, a subject with which few practitioners are familiar. He has in progress a treatise on the waters, and when issued from the press will be not only a guide to the invalid, but become the means of diffusing a greater amount of information concerning them than has ever been laid before the public. His close professional observation, his varied experience as resident physician here since 1859, and his scientific attainments and research, eminently fit him for such a task; and, wielding the "pen of a ready writer," his work cannot fail to be a success.

Proclamation by the Governor.

$500 REWARD.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, IT HAS BEEN MADE KNOWN to me that JACOB SPONAMORE stands indicted in the walking-trot Court with the murder of Thomas Coulter, on 1st November, 1862, and is now a fugitive from justice, going at large; Now, therefore, I, PRESTON H. LESLIE, Governor of the Commonwealth aforesaid, do hereby offer a reward of FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS for the apprehension, and the surrender and his delivery to the jailer of Washington county, in testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the Commonwealth to be affixed. Done at Frankfort, the 17th day of October, A. D. 1871, and in the 7th year of the Commonwealth.

P. H. LESLIE.

By the Governor: A. J. JAMES, Secretary of State.

DESCRIPTION.

Is about 6 feet 3 or 4 inches high, dark complexion, black hair and eyes, weighs about 175 pounds, about 35 years old.

Proclamation by the Governor

$500 REWARD.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, IT HAS BEEN MADE KNOWN to me that ALEXANDER GUNTER stands indicted in the walking-trot Court with the murder of James K. McSherry, and is now a fugitive from justice, going at large; Now, therefore, I, PRESTON H. LESLIE, Governor of the Commonwealth aforesaid, do hereby offer a reward of FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS for the apprehension, and the surrender and his delivery to the jailer of Union county, in testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the Commonwealth to be affixed. Done at Frankfort, the 4th day of November, A. D. 1871, and in the 7th year of the Commonwealth.

We had the pleasure of meeting in the city during his visit here several days Mr. John A. Jacobs, jr., Superintendent of the Kentucky Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, who so worthily fills the post held by his deceased father. He informs us that there are 81 pupils under his charge, and that the institution has accommodations for a few more, the maximum number which it is capable of receiving. Like the Kentucky Institution for the Blind, this is one of the noblest of our State charities, and occupies a high rank for the practical success attained in the improvement of the condition of the unfortunate for whose benefit it was established.

Ben. Townsend, the accommodating stage-driver on the route to Harrodsburg, has brought us an Anderson county turnip which weighs 8½ pounds, the largest of the season. And now having seen big turnips and beets and radishes enough to satisfy our curiosity for one season, we are prepared for big apples, big turkeys, and dressed hogs, and other articles which can be put to some use. For the best barrel of apples exhibited between now and Christmas we will give a copy of the Yeoman for one year, and the same in proportion for other articles, it being of course understood that we are to retain everything sent for exhibition. The only condition we would suggest is, that everybody should not send at once, as it might incommode us to store all the articles.

P. S. Since the above was written we have received from Capt. J. O. Blackburn, of Woodford, a dressed hog, which is the finest specimen of the kind we have seen this season. It was an eight months old Berkshire, and weighs 146 pounds net. We are working him up into first-class sausages. Next man.

DENTISTRY.—It will be seen, by a notice in another column of the Yeoman, that the partnership between Drs. Wilson & Martin has, by mutual consent, been dissolved. Dr. Wilson will continue the profession at the old stand. Dr. Wilson has been among us for several years, and all who have had occasion to call on him professionally will unhesitatingly bear testimony to his skill as a dentist, besides being a good citizen and a clever gentleman.

COUNTY COURTS.—Monday will be county court day in Woodford, Clark, and Franklin counties. The attendance at all the courts will be very large. Dealers in live stock generally and particularly hogs, are watching the markets very closely. Farmers want to sell, but buyers are bidding slowly, and do not appear anxious to buy at the present rates. Dave Peters will offer at public auction, on Monday, ten or twelve good work horses, besides some fancy stock.

Maj. W. H. Botts, of Warren, arrived in the city on Thursday night, and yesterday entered formally upon the discharge of the duties of his office. Since his appointment, at the time of Governor Leslie's inauguration, he has been attending the courts in the Warren circuit, for the purpose of closing up his practice. In his absence, W. T. Samuels, Esq., has continued to discharge the duties of Assistant Secretary of State.

As the time for the meeting of the Legislature approaches members are making preliminary visits to look out for boarding and eligible seats. Among the number whom we have had the pleasure of meeting within a few days have been Hon. W. F. Bond, of Anderson, Hon. T. J. Megibben, of Harrison and Hon. Hiram S. Powell, of Jackson.

T. S. Thurman, Esq., sheriff of Spencer county, settled in full the revenue of his county with the Auditor on Thursday last, the 23d inst. He is the first sheriff in the State to settle his revenue account in full for the year 1871. Too much praise cannot be awarded Mr. Thurman and the noble people of Spencer for his and their promptness.

NAVIGATION RESUMED.—The Dove No. 2, Sam. Sanders master, and G. M. Woods clerk, is the regular Louisville and Kentucky river packet. For arrivals and departures refer to another column. Our friend G. B. Macklin, at the corner of St. Clair and Wapping streets, is the agent. Any business connected with transportation on this packet will receive prompt attention at his hands.

TELEGRAPHIC.—The Western Union Telegraph Company have extended the wires from their office, on Main street, to the east committee room in the State House, and will, during the session of the Legislature, receive and send telegrams from that room. An operator will always be on hand.

Hon. I. A. Spalding, late Senator from Union, paid our city a brief visit on Thursday. In his retirement from politics he is devoting himself assiduously to the practice of law, and lending an active support to the development of internal improvements in Western Kentucky.

A distinguished wedding took place in Lexington, on Thursday, in the marriage of Mrs. Eliza Maclester, long recognized as one of the most charming leaders of society, to Hon. Geo. W. Woodward, formerly Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, and late Democratic Representative in Congress from the Twelfth District of that State.

The young gentlemen of Capital Lodge, I. O. G. T., will give a social hop at their new hall in Odd Fellows' building on Tuesday night next. Arrangements have been made to make the occasion a pleasant one, and all lovers of the mazy dance are cordially invited. Tickets for sale at Marshall's and McClure's book stores, at one dollar each.

PERSONAL.—Hon. Geo. M. Adams, member of Congress from the Ninth District of Kentucky, arrived in the city yesterday, and is stopping at the Capital Hotel.

HOW SPRING STATION HAD AN EXHIBITION.

The quiet precincts of Spring Station were considerably agitated last week over an event which threw the whole neighborhood into a fever of excitement. The incident occurred in the following manner: As all who have ever traveled on the cars between here and Lexington are aware, Spring Station is the depot about ten miles from Frankfort, at which persons wishing to visit the celebrated Woodburn farm of Mr. Alexander leave the cars—the depot building a one-story grocery, a school-house, and a covered cattle scale comprising the entire collection of houses. Being the depot for a very rich and populous neighborhood, however, it is also a post-office, which makes it the favorite resort, especially of the young gentry, to hear the news on the arrival of trains and to read the papers. One day, while a number were seated in the depot, the postmaster laid before them a letter he had received from a showman in Ohio, who propounded a number of questions with a view to ascertaining the prospects and feasibility of giving an exhibition there, being evidently under the impression that the place was a town of some consequence, and asking, among other questions, the following:

No. 1. What hall accommodation have you—size, and how lighted and warmed?

No. 2. Can I secure a license from the trustees?

No. 3. What prospect for attendance, &c. &c.?

In a spirit of fun, one of the party proposed to answer the letter, and sent the following replies to the interrogatories:

No. 1. Fine school hall; good seats, well lighted and warmed.

No. 2. License; charge nominal.

No. 3. No exhibition having been here for some time, will, in all probability, secure attendance of the whole population.

Thus answered, the letter was mailed and nothing more was thought of it until after the lapse of four or five days, when, by the eastern mail, the postmaster received a number of large and flaming posters announcing that on Saturday, November 18th, Professor Blank, the renowned and world-wide presiding deity, would exhibit his wonderful skill in sleight of hand and his celebrated trained canary birds, to the citizens of Spring Station at the Hall of the public school. Doors open at 7 P. M.; performance to begin at 7½ P. M. precisely. Admission 50 cents, children half price. Accompanying was a letter enclosing complimentary tickets for the Trustees of the town and the postmaster, and requesting the latter to make all necessary arrangements, and to be at the depot Saturday afternoon to show him to his hotel, and give him all necessary information. As the postmaster showed the posters to the group assembled at the depot, and made known the contents of the letter, there was a look of blank surprise on the countenances of all present, who realized that having projected a harmless joke they had gotten themselves in a dilemma. It was too late to notify the confiding showman of his mistake. He had already incurred an expense in getting up his posters, and the next day would arrive to give his exhibition. The only thing left was to make it as much of a success as possible. Accordingly they resolved themselves into a committee to distribute the posters in the neighborhood and solicit attendance, constituting themselves also Trustees pro tem, and appropriating the complimentary tickets. At the appointed time the Professor, a dapper, bustling showman, disembarked from the train, with several zinc trunks, a St. Charles spaniel, and a couple of mammoth cages with canaries. The postmaster was on hand, and in lieu of a hotel took him to his house, while the showman, looking in vain for the houses which constituted the town, was informed that the population was not dense though sufficiently large and near at hand to furnish a fall house. A fire was made in the rusty stove in the 15 by 20 school-house near by, and the shades of night found it ablaze with the light of four kerosene lamps, and with a stage at one end extemporized from a lumber pile and some of the school benches. By dint of hard exertions, the Trustees succeeded in mustering a good audience from the neighborhood, and the Professor went through with his exhibition delighted with his success and affording delight to the assembled multitude. The next morning, with zinc trunks, dog and canary birds, he left on the early train, declaring he had had an agreeable and remunerative visit, while the trustees are so impressed with the eligibility of Spring Station as a place for exhibitions, that we learn they contemplate opening a correspondence with Forrest, Booth, Joe Jefferson, and others, proposing that they shall play there during the winter. They are a little sensitive when anybody alludes to the hard work they had to drum up an audience, but claim to have satisfactorily solved a question of long standing in that neighborhood, which was, "can a try showman do well at Spring Station?" by pointing to the great success under their manipulation of the canary showman who held forth there on Saturday night last.

From a citizen of Logan county, says the Green River Pantagraph, we learn that Mr. J. H. Bell, of that county, was hunting with a double-barreled gun, loaded with small shot, and in passing through the woods he discovered a magnificent buck approaching, and, having no large shot, he opened the larger blade of a small pocket-knife, dropped it in his gun on top of the load already there, and killed his buck dead. The handle of the knife was ruined, but it was otherwise uninjured.

Rev. R. A. Holland, formerly a Methodist minister, who was recently appointed a deacon in an Episcopal Church of Baltimore, has since received a call to St. George's Episcopal Church, St. Louis, Mo.

Three of the principal hotels of Washington are yielding to the demands of modern convenience by putting in elevators. A friend who has been the victim of their charges, and expects to go on this winter, expresses the hope that they will not elevate their prices.

LOUISVILLE ADVERTISEMENTS.—In the advertising columns of the Yeoman this morning will be found several advertisements of business and professional firms of Louisville. Mr. Chas. J. Clarke, architect, was born and reared in this county, and is too well known to require any mention at our hands. C. Ketchum, wholesale and retail dealer in carpets, oil cloths, shades and curtains, offers very great inducements to anyone desiring anything in his line of business. Of Ruler's Hotel and Restaurant it is useless to speak—"you know how it is yourself"—that is, if you have ever been there.

RIVER MATTERS.—The river has fallen slightly since our last. The rain of Thursday night, if the weather should not turn too cold, will cause another rise. The Dove arrived from Louisville Thursday afternoon, and returned yesterday morning at eight o'clock.

Rev. H. A. M. Henderson, of this city, will officiate at the quarterly meeting of the Methodist Church in Winchester, Ky., which takes place on the 2d Saturday and Sunday in December.

A sportive deer, says the Columbia Spectator, was seen "gambling" on the hillsides almost within the corporate limits, and adds: "As a town, we are very rural."

It will be seen from the announcement elsewhere that D. T. Towle, Esq., of Green county, is a candidate for Assistant Clerk of the Senate.

The Green River Pantagraph wants the Legislature to take some steps to prevent the wholesale and wanton destruction of fish in that river.

Wilkes' Spirit has officially recorded the fact that Goldsmith Maid has beaten Dexter's best time in trotting one mile.

MEETING OF THE HARRISON BAR.

At the meeting of the bar of Harrison county, held at the court-house, in Cynthiana, on the 18th of November, 1871, Hon. J. S. Boyd was called to the chair, and W. W. Cleary, Esq., appointed secretary.

On motion of W. W. Trimble, Esq., it was resolved that the call for a convention of the lawyers of Kentucky to assemble at Louisville on the 15th of December, is cordially approved, and that all the members of this bar be hereby appointed delegates to said Convention.

And thereupon the meeting adjourned.

J. S. BOYD, Chairman.

W. W. CLEARY, Secretary.

The Lebanon Standard, which has a Hopper which is very apt to gather in anything good which comes near its mill, grinds out the following, which is funny enough to make a man burst all the buttons off his clothes with laughter:

NOT ON THAT LINE.

On Monday night last a considerable quantity of underclothing, of Hon. R. A. Barton, was taken from a clothes-line in his yard. The taking of a Senator's shirts might be ranked with breaches of privilege, and should attract the attention of the drawers of legislative bills. Some special legislation may be demanded, as to replace them will necessitate the making of a considerable bill.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.—James Barton, a brakeman on freight train No. 15 on the Short Line Railroad, was crushed to death while coupling cars at the head of Jefferson street about seven o'clock yesterday morning. The train was about starting for Cincinnati, and Barton was in the act of coupling on the engine, when he was caught between the tender and the car and crushed across the hips and small of the back, breaking the back bone. He was taken to the house of Mr. Frank Moore, on Jefferson street, between Floyd and Preston, where he died at a quarter past three o'clock P. M. His body was placed upon the 10:40 train last night and taken to Lexington, where he has a sister living, and to-day he will be removed to his home in Frankfort for interment.

The above is from the Courier-Journal of the 23d. The deceased was born and reared in this city, and his many relatives and friends will mourn his untimely death. The remains arrived here on Thursday night, and were interred in the Frankfort cemetery yesterday morning at 10 o'clock.

Stone Coal in Lewis County.

The people of Lewis county, living upon the head of Kentucky, and between that and the head waters of Salt Lick, were very much excited last week over the discovery of a thick vein of excellent coal. It is said to be of superior quality and seven feet in depth. If this is true, it is a most valuable discovery, and will attract immediate attention of enterprising men to that region of country. It is only about eight miles from Mt. Carmel and twenty-four miles from Maysville.

Lewis county abounds with many valuable resources, which only need capital and enterprise for their development. Along the boundary between Lewis and Greenup there are rich deposits of iron ore, with immense forests of timber for the production of charcoal with which to smelt it, and limestone convenient for fusing purposes. The white oak timber of that county is of a very superior quality, and exists in great abundance. It is of fine texture, solid and tough, and the best which can be found anywhere for the manufacture of pious and wheeled vehicles. Black and white walnut, chestnut, ash, cherry, maple, poplar, hickory, and a variety of other trees, of timber used for manufacturing purposes, abound in all parts of the county. Immense quarries of the best building stone may be found in the river hills, convenient for transportation. It is said the freestones of Lewis, from its fine texture, and freedom from disintegration by the presence of iron and other foreign substances, is of the best quality found in the western country. With such resources there is nothing to prevent Lewis county from becoming, at some day, a busy field for manufacturing industries, and one of the richest counties in the State. The Kentucky and Great Eastern Railroad will run forty miles through her territory upon the river bank, and afford an outlet for her exports to any part of the country.—Maysville Bulletin.

CAVALRY HORSES.—We understand that Mr. Richie, Government agent for purchasing cavalry horses, is at the present time on that business. Persons having such animals for sale in this and adjoining counties would probably find it to their interest to call on Mr. R.

Lexington Statesman.

Sir William Jenner writes to the British Medical Journal: "A statement having been widely circulated to the effect that the Queen's recent illness was the result of revaccination, I must say, by inserting this letter, permit me to give the most unqualified contradiction to the report. There is not a shadow of foundation for it in facts. Her Majesty's recent illness did not commence till many months after the revaccination. There was no connection, direct or indirect, between the two. I should not have contradicted so foundationless a statement had I not heard that, in consequence of the positive terms in which the assertion is made, it has received a certain amount of credence, and is so causing harm to the public health."

On the first Monday of December Congress convenes at Washington. The standing committees of the House of Representatives will then be announced by Speaker Blaine. The assembling of this Congress is not looked for with any hope or expectation of good by the country. On the contrary, there is only evil contemplated from it. It will be a Presidential session. Its principal business will be by some hook or crook to re-elect General Grant, either through the employment of the soldiery or Executive patronage, and laws for the extension of both will no doubt be passed. It will be a session devoted to the oppression of the South and the corruption of the North. Cincinnati Enquirer.

FOUND DEAD.—Lloyd Posey, son of the late Hon. Fayette Posey, of Henderson, was found dead on Tuesday morning, in the woods adjoining Jack McClain's residence, about three miles from Henderson. He had lain out during the storm on Monday night, and had died from exposure. Posey was a young man of dissolute habits, and his untimely death was brought about by too free an indulgence of liquor.—Evansville Courier.

Rev. Thomas W. Penick, of Oakland Station, is buying up, and daily shipping from that place, large quantities of corn for the contractors on the Owensboro and Russellville railroad. He is paying only $1.85 per barrel, and experiences no trouble in buying all he wants at that price.—Green River Pantagraph.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

To the People of the Commonwealth of Kentucky:

WHEREAS, We have been signally blessed as a people with the favor and protection of Divine Providence, which has crowned the year with plenty and general prosperity, preserved to us the enjoyment of civil and religious liberty, exempted us from the ravages of war, pestilence, famine, fire, and other calamities which have so fearfully scourged other peoples and States, permitting no evil to befall us but such as is incident to the common lot of humanity. And inasmuch as we are assured that every good and perfect gift cometh down to us from the Father of all mercies,

Therefore, I, Preston H. Leslie, Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, in devout recognition of Him that careth for us, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 30th inst., as a day of solemn public thanksgiving, recommending that the citizens, ceasing on that day from all secular employments, shall repair to their respective places of worship and devoutly give thanks to Almighty God for His goodness to us in the past, and entreat His continued blessings to us as a people.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the Commonwealth to be affixed, at the Capital, in the city of Frankfort, this first day of November, A. D. 1871.

P. H. LESLIE.

By the Governor: A. J. JAMES, Secretary of State.

MARRIED.

At the residence of the bride's father, on the evening of the 23d inst., by Rev. J. R. Hendricks, Mr. Geo. Pageston Wright and Miss Eliza Bickering, daughter of Mr. Jask, Gore, all of South Frankfort.

In Cincinnati, on Wednesday last, Mr. LANCE Bickering, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. MARY Bickering, widow of the late Col. Leonard Metcalf, of Nicholas county.

On Thursday, November 23d, by the Rev. J. S. Shipman, Judge Geo. W. Woodward, of Louisville, and Mrs. ELIZA MACLESTER, of Lexington.

LOCAL NOTICES.

For cheap gas fixtures, go to Seely's, St. Clair street.

A CHALLENGE: $100 to $500 dollars. Open to any person in Frankfort that can produce as skillful a specimen of plumbing (their own make) as done at Seely's, St. Clair street.

It is said that if a puff of air were to be blown into a vein of an animal, death would instantaneously follow, because circulation would be stopped. The blood makes the entire circuit of the human body every seven minutes, and whenever this circulation is impeded or any of the channels are clogged by impurities which ought to be carried off, disease follows—fever or a disorder of liver or kidneys, or scurvy, or dyspepsia. To get at and remove the source of the difficulty use the old and infallible blood purifier, DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS.

If your plumbing needs repairing, go to Oscar Seely, the only practical plumber in Frankfort, St. Clair street.

For main or sewer pipe, at low prices go to Seely's, St. Clair street.

For all plumbing or gas fitting, call on Oscar Seely, St. Clair street. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Protecting Animals in Stormy Weather.

Farmers, generally, do not appreciate the loss sustained in the condition and health of domestic animals by their exposure to cold rains and storms. Most animals can endure cold as long as they can keep dry, but their bodies becoming wet, and kept wet, evaporation commences, which carries off heat rapidly, and they are soon chilled through and through. This almost always deranges health, and most especially with milch cows, which are less vigorous and less able to resist sudden changes from cold to heat with impunity, but the opposite is often attended with very injurious consequences. Again, if even the health of the animal is not seriously impaired, a large quantity of food will be required to sustain the heat thus lost, or there must be necessarily a waste of flesh. On the score of economy in food, to say nothing of deranged health, it will be cheaper to house cattle from cold storms and from wet, whether it be falling rain or snow. A certain amount of food is required to keep up the temperature of the body, and in extreme cold weather the appetite is much sharper than in mild weather. The extra food ordinarily used in cold weather is not employed for laying up flesh, but is consumed to make heat. It is this principle which renders it more expensive to fatten animals in winter than in warm weather. There is considerable difference of opinion among stock men in regard to the winter management of milch cows. The old class of farmers insist that stock is healthier when allowed to run in the yard most of the day; while others urge that the best results are obtained by keeping cows in stable most of the time during winter, allowing them to go out each day for water, and returning them immediately to the stable. There is no doubt but that the latter system will require less food than the other, but is not yet fully established, that such close confinement is promotive of the largest development of health and vigor, even when stables are kept clean and well ventilated. In good weather, stock enjoy their freedom in the yard, and a few hours from their stall in the middle or warm part of the day seems to be more in accordance with nature, even though more food may be required to carry the animal through. But in stormy weather, or when it is extremely cold, doubtless the best place for cattle is under shelter. Nothing pays better than care and attention of stock during the winter, and if a saving is to be made both in food and health, all storms and sudden changes of temperature must be guarded against as far as possible.

How to Hunt Wild Bees.

Choose a warm, clear day in the fall, when the bees do not find an abundance of honey to gather from natural sources. The necessary articles which we want to take with us are honeycomb and coils of fine. Take four or five pounds of liquid honey; if it has been gathered the present season so much the better. Select three or four pieces of bright, new comb, and as much old comb, which should contain no bee-bread. Take an old tin pail that will hold five or six quarts, fill it a quarter full of ashes, put in some good, hard wood coals of fire, and cover them up with more ashes. Get a board an inch thick and eighteen or twenty inches square. Bore an inch hole in its centre and insert therein a piece of hard wood two inches in diameter and four or five feet long. This is our bee stand. Now, we are ready for action. Go at least a mile from where the bees are kept, and as near the locality as convenient where the wild bees are supposed to be. Set up your bee stand. The lower end of the standard should be sharp, that it may readily enter the ground. Lay a piece of the empty comb on the stand and fill it with the liquid honey. Unless the honey be quite thin it should be diluted with water. Now, uncover your coals of fire and drop pieces of your old comb on them. If the comb be moist and scented with a few drops of ash, it will be more sure to attract bees to the place. As soon as the bees find the honey they will fill themselves with it and fly in a direct line for home. As soon as the bees are at work in large numbers, follow up the line; but if unsuccessful in finding the tree, remove your stand for some distance away, at right angles from where it stood at first. Get the bees at work as at first, and by following up the two lines to where they meet, the tree may be found.

SAYING "HATEFUL" THINGS.—What an evil disposition is that which leads people to say hateful things for the mere pleasure of saying them. You are never safe with such a person. When you have done your best to please, and feeling pleasantly, out will pop some underhand stab which you alone can comprehend—a sneer which is masked, but which is too well aimed to be misunderstood. It may be at your person, it may be at your mental feeling, it may be at your peace of mind, but it will have some little secret opinion confined in a moment of genuine confidence. It matters not how sacred it may be to you, he will have his finger at it; and since the wish is to make you suffer, he is all the happier the nearer he touches your heart. Just half a dozen words, only spoken because he is afraid you are too happy or too connected with the thing he is blowing. How many sleepless nights have such attacks caused tender-hearted men! How, after them, one awakes with aching eyes and head, to remember that speech before everything—that bright, sharp, well aimed needle of a speech that probed the very center of your soul!

A Scotch Entomologist and His Guest.

There is a story, perhaps, forgotten by all but men who were students at a certain college nearly thirty years ago, of an enthusiastic professor of entomology, not celebrated for his exercise of hospitality, who was so delighted at the arrival of an eminent pursuer of insects that he invited him to board and bed in his chambers. Next morning Dr. McFly greeted his guest: "And how did ye sleep the night, Master Beechmouth?" "Not very well. A strange bed, perhaps. " "Ah!" quoth the Doctor, eagerly, "ye were just bitten by something, eh?" "Well, to tell you the truth, Doctor, I was." "Just think of that! Bitten, were ye? Now can ye say it was anything noteworthy that bit ye? peculiar, eh?" "Oh, I think so. But such chaps for biting I never saw in my life." "I should think so, indeed!" (with great glee); "they're Sicilian fleas. I imported them myself."

THE VALUE OF WOOD ASHES FOR WHEAT.—A "Subscriber" sends to the American Agriculturist the following as his experience in using wood-ashes, viz: that in quantities of only eight bushels per acre they have a marked effect; that they push the wheat forward several days; thus getting it ahead of that critical period when it is so apt to be attacked by rust; that they strengthen the stem and increase its solidity. All of which and much more, says the Agriculturist, we can readily endorse. In fact, ashes are an excellent application for all crops, and especially for orchards.

REMEDY FOR EAR ACHE.—Generally, heat is the best remedy. Apply warm poultice or warm oil to the ear. Rub the back of the ear with warm liniment. In case of febrile discharge, carefully syringe the ear with warm milk and water. In all cases keep the ear thoroughly cleansed. Relief is often given by rubbing the back of the ear with a little kerosene and water.

JEMIMA BROWN'S BREAD.—Two cups sour milk, one cup sweet milk, two cups Indian meal, one cup flour, one-half cup molasses, one and a half teaspoonful of soda. Mix the meal and flour well together, then add the milk, then the molasses, and stir them well; dissolve the soda and add last thing. Steam in a two-quart dish two hours, and bake twenty minutes. Serve warm with butter.

FOR SALE
A LARGE & SPLENDID FARM, AND EXTENSIVE AND VARIOUS PERSONAL PROPERTY.
HEALTH REQUIRING ME TO WINTER
in Florida, I will sell the farm on which I reside, containing over seven hundred and eighty acres, situated in Franklin and Woodford Counties, Ky., five miles from Frankfort, on the Railroad to Lexington, and the Turnpike to Versailles, and I can confidently say there is no better farm in Kentucky, all things considered.
The Location is beautiful, convenient, and healthy.
The Buildings are elegant, spacious, substantial, and for all appropriate purposes; the Farm being supplied with three other comfortable dwellings and suitable buildings, besides the principal residence.
The Soil was naturally good, and has been kept in a high state of fertility, and is now ready to yield the heaviest crops of hemp, grain, and grasses.
The Water is of all kinds, abundant, and convenient for domestic, stock, and ornamental uses.
The Fencing is of durable materials of various kinds, is in good condition, with timber ample for future supply.
Society is excellent; and religious, educational, and social conveniences abundant and varied.
A Division of the Farm into four parts can be judiciously effected, so that each will have its appropriate dwelling and other buildings; and I will sell separately that part on the north side of the railroad, having superior soil, water, timber, roads, and two sets of buildings, all in good condition.
The Terms will be made easy, after a cash payment of one-half of the purchase money at the time of giving possession in October next. Purchasers are invited to inspect the premises in person, or apply by mail for full description.
An Auction Sale will be held on the premises on the 24th of September next, consisting of Durham Cattle, "Improved Kentucky" Sows, Cashmere Goats, Fattening Hogs, Farm and Saddle Horses, Crops on hand, and implements of all kinds, which will be duly advertised.
